Richmond, Virginia

CONTENTS OF VOLUME THIRTEEN

Number One, Summer 1963

John Tyler: The Planter of Sherwood Forest ..... Robert Seager II 4

"You perceive how strongly and with great intensity my mind runs upon the results of agriculture. It is natural for one to think of that by which he lives."—John Tyler, 1850

Early Fincastle ..... Frances J. Niederer 12

Founded just before the struggle for independence began, the seat of Botetourt County was the center of a growing frontier community.

They Called Them Watering Places ..... Harry Evans Woodward 21

The White, the Hot, the Old Sweet, Warm Springs, Sweet Chalybeate, Salt Sulphur —the names themselves conjure up a bygone era.

Aquia Creek ..... Harold F. Round 28

The creek has played a significant, if passive, role in history, especially during the Civil War.

The Society of the Cincinnati in the State of Virginia ..... Oliver Jackson Sands, Jr. 35

The Virginia Chapter of this patriotic society dates from the close of the Revolution.

The Potowmack Canal Today ..... Alexander Crosby Brown 42

Recreation rather than navigation now draws people to remains of locks and ruins of Matildaville.

Number Two, Autumn 1963

Washington Houses of Jefferson County ..... Philip R. Smith, Jr. 5

Long eclipsed by Mount Vernon, these other Washington houses are now in the traveler's eye.

Medal of Honor of the Revolution ..... Charles E. Hatch, Jr. 14
Sergeant William Brown was cited for gallant action at Yorktown in 1781 and received one of the first Purple Heart awards.

The President's Daughters ..... Helen Stone Peterson 18
Jefferson tried to keep Martha and Maria as near him as possible, whether at Monticello or at the White House.

The First Regiment of Virginia Volunteers ..... Lee A. Wallace, Jr. 23
Through the ten years before secession this regiment was a familiar part of Richmond life.

Scribe of the Old Dominion ..... Lucy Gaylord Starnes 32
John Esten Cooke's writings were of Virginia, by a Virginian who took part in many events of which he wrote.

Meem's Bottom ..... William R. Dunn 38
The covered bridge at Meem's Bottom is a visual bridge to a history that recalls Indians, pioneer settlers, and the ebb and flow of Civil War.

Number Three, Winter 1963-64

Seven Days in a Quandary ..... Robert L. Scribner 5
Jefferson Davis and his Cabinet struggled to keep the Confederacy alive in Danville —but where was General Lee?

The Henkel Press—The First Sixty Years ..... The Staff 16
A pioneer Virginia press first printed works in German.

The University of Virginia During the Civil War ..... John H. Moore 23
The faculty served the Confederacy well throughout the long struggle, but their first loyalty was to the cause of learning.

Was George Wythe Murdered? ..... Calvin Jarrett 33
A celebrated case of 1806 posed questions which are still not answered.

Guns for Independence ..... Elizabeth Dabney Coleman 40
The State Manufactory of Arms at Fredericksburg turned out muskets, bayonets, and other weapons for Virginia soldiers throughout the Revolutionary War.

Number Four, Spring 1964

Farmer Washington ..... Robert L. Scribner 4
He found his greatest happiness in managing his estate of Mount Vernon.

The Chesapeake Bay's New Crossing ..... R. K. T. Larson 10
After 350 years, Virginia's Eastern Shore is at last linked by highway to the South.

James Markham Marshall ..... Randolph W. Church 22
The brother of the Chief Justice negotiated the purchase of nearly 220,000 acres of Virginia.

Judith Rives of Castle Hill ..... John H. Moore 30
A distinguished daughter of Virginia made her mark as diplomatic hostess and commentator on a troubled era.

John Clayton, Scientist ..... Edmund and Dorothy S. Berkeley 36
. . . one who was an ornament and an honour to the country, at a time when Virginia was barren of men of scientific and literary merit . . .

Silk-Masters of Virginia ..... Amy H. Whitton 43
Enthusiasts hoped to bring a new industry into Virginia and to free the colony from its dependence on tobacco.
